

Useful Websites

Social Networking Sites:

But my kids use these!

www.facebook.com

www.myspace.com

www.linkedin.com

Social networking sites are no longer just for 20 somethings. They are very effective way to streamline both social and professional networking. You can find folks that are interested in Civil Liberties and the Golden Girls with one easy click. You can also seek out self-identified folks within your network who are interested in things you are organizing. For example, on my space you can search a specific zip code for LGBT individuals. Another example is searching the Chicago network on facebook for people interested in progressive politics or the ACLU. I highly recommend joining one or all of these to see for yourself what all the buzz and hype is about. The best part about each of these sites is they are incredibly useful and FREE to join!

Activists Sites and Blogs:

Who has time to keep up!

www.aclu.org

www.aclu-il.org

<http://www.aclu-il.org/blog/>

action.aclu.org

<http://www.communitysharesillinois.org/>

This fast paced and every changing world is tough to keep up with. Going to blogs, sending an ACLU free and/or signing up for action alerts can be a simple solution to streamline the way you stay up to date. Check out some of the helpful websites above. There are similar websites to these above and they can be as easy as clicking another link to find!